ENTERPRISE CONTENT MANAGEMENT

CHALLENGE:

Many companies have important documents that are dispersed through folders, paper files, emails, and systems. Employees can spend up to 30% of their time searching for internal documents in their current system that drastically slows down company flows. By having paper documents stored in an office setting you not only increase your chance of misplacing these documents, but you are also putting your company at a security risk. Printing large amounts of paper can also increase company costs.

VALUE:

Enterprise Content Management (ECM) in its simplest form is software used to centrally store, track, generate, and distribute an organization's unstructured information. You can think of ECM as being a knowledge distribution network that spreads blueprints to problems already solved within an enterprise and deduplicates effort by making knowledge searchable and deliverable. One of the biggest benefits ECM offers is the digitization of traditionally paper-based processes. The better engineered these processes are, the higher the benefit to the organization.

BENIFITS:

- Reduce Paper
- Save Time
- 100% Secure
- Track Involvement
